Why do we collect information about you?

Doctors and nurses have to keep a record about your health and any treatment that we give you. This is called your "GP record", and helps us to really look after you.

Your GP record is only used to help doctors and nurses keep you well - and make you better when you are not so well.

What do we record?

We keep a record of every time that you see someone at the practice, as well as times that you have been seen somewhere else, such as in the Accident and Emergency department of a hospital.

We keep a record of:

- Your name, address, and info about those looking after you (such as your mum and dad)
- Your home telephone and mobile number (if you have one), and your email address if you want us to
- Details of the times that you saw a doctor or nurse, here at the surgery and at other places
- Any tests that you have had (such as an x ray)

How we keep your information safe and private

Your GP record is kept on a really secure computer system. Only doctors, nurses and receptionists that we give permission to can look at your information. No one else.

If you have a mobile phone, or an email address, then we will only use that to contact you when it's about "medical stuff" – like reminding you about an appointment that you might have to see your doctor at the practice.

If you don't want us to text you anything at all, then just tell us.

If the doctors and nurses at the practice don't know what's wrong with you, we will ask someone at the hospital to see you – and we will give that doctor or nurse information about you and what's making you feel unwell.

Any Questions?

If you have any questions about how your data is kept, then please do ask someone.

Or, you (or your mum or dad) could ask the doctor who is in charge of all this "data" stuff and "keeping things private"

Sometimes we have to tell other people about stuff in your GP record. Sometimes, "it's the law".

If a judge tells us to, then we will have to give them information about you. If the police tells us to, then sometimes we have to tell them as well.

If you're ill, and that illness could be spread to all your friends and classmates, then we might need to let the right people know – so that they can try to make sure that no-one else catches that illness as well.

And sometimes we have to tell other people if we are worried that you, or someone else in your family, could be in danger.

Whenever we can, we would always tell you if we were going to tell someone else about you and GP record.

Some other medical places, such as the Accident and Emergency department at our local hospital, or other doctors and nurses that you might see when the practice is closed, can take a peek at your GP record – but only if they ask you (or your mum or dad) first. The information in your GP record could be very helpful to them when they are trying to make you better.

You don't have to say yes if they ask you, and you can ask the practice not to allow anyone else to be even able to look at your GP record like this if you want.
